Moorish Mosaic Workshop

Also called Zellij-Tilework

Immersive
Activities

Moorish Mosaic, Moroccan Tilework or Zellij. Zellige or Zillij is a typically Moroccan Art Form, which has been gratefully preserved by Families of Moroccan master's form generations back to the 10th century, thanks to their love of work well done, nobility of materials selected, and full mastery of required know-how.

A whole series of stages must be accomplished before handing over the piece to its decorator.

The craftsman unifies the clay paste with his arms and feet, making it less stiff, then the pieces are split into blocks and hardened again under sun light and flattened with a bat. Then, parts of 10x10 cm are obtained and placed under sun light for as long as it took to fully dry, which corresponded to the first burnt stage.
